

Oxford Geology Group

Oxfordshire's geological society for over sixty years

Annual Report of Trustees 2020-2021

The continuing Covid-19 crisis, with waves of new variant emerging and related governmental regulations made the established activity of The Oxford Geology Group (OGG) nearly impossible again during this reporting period.

Online activity continued via the OGG website www.ogg.rocks and through our social media platforms. We continue to revise and create new public content pages, providing up-to-date, engaging reference and reading for all those interested in the earth and planetary sciences. Our aim is to promote greater understanding the planet and our solar system. We already have had much good feedback, our online material will be a useful reference for schools, colleges and the general public.

We tried two public engagement activities in the form of georambles during the period. These were very poorly attended and we can only assume the waves of Covid Omicron variants had an impact.

Now that life appears to returning to normality, we can attempt to reboot our annual programme of public lectures in the coming year and although we have resisted moving such activity online, we may have to consider a hybrid of online and in-person events.
