Trustees Report

The trustees are pleased to present the second annual report of the Religion Media Centre from 1^{st} April $2018 - 31^{st}$ March 2019.

Governance

The Religion Media Centre was entered onto the Register of Charities with the registered charity number 1169562, on 10th October 2016. It is a Charitable Incorporated Organization.

Its constitution states its objects as: 'To advance education of the public in world religion, including the Baha'i faith; Buddhism; Christianity; Hinduism; Islam; Jainism; Judaism; Sikhism and Zoroastrianism by: the dissemination of accurate, authoritative, independent and impartial information and research about religious faiths to the media; and the provision of media training to religious organisations.'

The trustees have met five times during the year and the advisory council once. The trustees have remained in place, with the exception of Niall Duffy who resigned upon taking a job overseas.

Our Trustees have supported the work of the charity in governance, fund raising, editorial content and marketing. They assume responsibilities set out in a document received upon joining, which lists their role in having ultimate responsibility for compliance with charity law and with the RMC's own charitable objectives these being:- setting the RMC's strategic direction; appointing and line managing the work of the RMC's senior member of staff; prioritising the RMC's activities and monitoring progress; supporting, but not directing, the team working on projects and content.

The advisory board met twice -9^{th} July 2018 and 12^{th} Feb 2019 – and advises the RMC trustees with contacts, editorial content, operations, strategy, network of commentators and training. During this year, Mandip Sahota and Yas Taherzadeh resigned. The trustees are initiating a review of the advisory board and its remit. Its members are:

Professor Adam Dinham: Director of Faiths and Civic Society at Goldsmiths University, London

Dr Clive Field: Co-Director of British Religion in Numbers

Canon Ed Newell: Director Cumberland Lodge
Rev George Pitcher: Author, journalist and vicar

Jasvir Singh: Lawyer and co-chair Faiths Forum for London

Professor Jolyon Mitchell: Director Centre for Theology and Public Issues, Edinburgh University

Katie Harrison: Director of the Faith Research Centre, ComRes

Lord Navnit Dholakia: Deputy leader Liberal Democrats in the House of Lords

Nick Spencer: Research Director Theos
Roger Bolton: Journalist and broadcaster

Rev Tony Miles: Methodist minister at Westminster Central Hall

Charitable objectives:

The Religion Media Centre is an impartial and independent organization aiming to help the media report and understand religion. It has no editorial line nor does it promote any one religion, or religious belief in general. Instead, it exists to provide accurate, timely and relevant information to the media, enabling the public to be better informed.

85% of the world's population identifies with a religious group, so understanding religion and belief is and will remain central to public life and debate, however significant the growth of secularism. Tens of millions of people in the UK continue to identify with a religious faith. Religious literacy is essential to understanding the world in which we live. The media plays a key role in developing and enhancing this understanding.

Activities, achievements and performance:

The RMC engaged Ruth Peacock as project co-ordinator on a consultancy basis. More than thirty people have been involved in making the Centre work, on a freelance basis. A team of seven journalists has been assembled to edit the website, run the twitter feed, create films and write copy. They hold regular editorial meetings to plan stories ahead.

More commentators on religious affairs, many from universities, joined our database which stands at more than 200. They contributed to more than 40 fact sheets which went up on the website over the year and provided comment on news stories. Our twitter feed was maintained by Sophie Gregory, a young journalist with great determination and enthusiasm who built up the twitter following. The trustees agreed to start providing films to engage more people and we have engaged a social media specialist, Dan Forshaw, to help drive up engagement.

The website started a blog, giving space for a longer commentary on a running news story or religious topic in the news.

The RMC took on the organization of the second Religion Media Festival, held on April 30th 2019, in partnership with the Jewish community centre JW3. Planning took place throughout the year and top speakers included Rabbi Lord Jonathan Sacks and James Purnell, deputy director of the BBC. The festival subcommittee reported back to the Trustees who reviewed funding and content decisions.

Three training courses were held: Media training for faith representatives; Reporting Christianity in Britain; and Reporting Religion in Britain. Feedback was positive. Four trainers were engaged to devise and deliver training for journalists and faith groups. They included teachers of RE, journalists with training experience and representatives from faith groups.

Based on this initial experience, trustees reviewed the training model and agreed to work with partner organizations in the future, such as faith groups and educators, to offer future courses, alongside seminars and workshops. Journalism training departments expressed an interest in a version of the training which can be delivered in an evening. Plans were made for the first of these, delivered in April 2019 at the Press Association.

A supporter, Shabbar Dhalla, has continued to maintain and update the website. We contract graphic designers for one off projects.

We held the first meeting of journalists interested in reporting religion, with an invited guest speaker, and hope to make progress towards creating a membership association next year.

Funding:

In this financial year, we received £30,000 from the Porticus Trust and £1,000 from Bahai's UK. In addition funds were received to stage the second Religion and Media Festival: £3750 from the University of Kent, £5,000 from the Jerusalem Trust and a promised £800 from Coexist House.

Payments of fees were made to people acting as consultants, or individual freelances, or small companies.

The RMC has an anti-bribery policy and accepts funds from those who support our vision, values and aims; who have a clear governance structure and transparent accountability. The RMC's long term goal is to seek donations from a wide variety of organisations, capping the amount from any one institution as a proportion of its annual income in order to protect the Centre from any undue influence. It seeks support from organizations and individuals with an interest in the accurate reporting of religion in the media, including academic and religious institutions, companies, charities, media organisations and government.

Our business case is reviewed during the year.

Statement of public benefit

The Trustees declare that they have complied with their duty to have due regard to the guidance on public benefit published by the Charity Commission in exercising their powers and duties.

Academics working in the fields of theology and religion in society have engaged with the Centre, offering fact sheets and comment as it brings their work to a wider audience. Faith leaders and media organizations have engaged with us, seeking advice on news stories and commentators.

Results

The Charity achieved a surplus of £16,782 (2018 - £13,857) in the year. Net assets at the end of the year were £30,639 (2018 - £13,857) in liquid funds.

Reserves Policy

The Charity is at an early stage of development and is keeping its costs low, with no future commitments or overheads as staff are freelance. The current policy is simply to retain enough reserves to cover costs and to build up sufficient resources to fulfil the Charity's activities in the ensuing year.

Responsibilities of Trustees regarding the accounts

Charity law requires the Trustees to prepare a receipts and payments account and a statement of assets and liabilities for each financial year. In addition, they are responsible for keeping proper accounting records which are sufficient to show and explain the Charity transactions and to disclose with reasonable accuracy at any time the financial position of the Charity. They are also responsible for safeguarding the assets of the Charity and hence for taking reasonable steps for the prevention and detection of fraud and other irregularities
